Prof. Mary Kay Vaughn
Prof. Barbara Weinstein
Co-Editors, Hispanic American Historical Review
Department of History
University of Maryland
College Park, Maryland 20742-7315

Dear Mary Kay and Barbara:

I write on behalf of the Latin Americanists in the history department in order to present our bid for the editorship of the Hispanic American Historical Review. We have vetted this bid with History Chairman Alan Tully, Director Ad Interim Bryan Roberts of the Lozano Long Institute of Latin American Studies, and Dean Ad Interim Judith H. Langlois of the School of Liberal Arts. For Baylor University, Interim Dean Lee Nordt of the College of Arts and Sciences and Chairman Jeffrey S. Hamilton of the History Department have also approved this offer. All agree with us that the successful bid of the HAHFR would contribute substantially to each university’s Latin American Studies program and Department of History. Therefore, the university administrators above support this bid with significant contributions of office space, equipment, faculty class reductions, and in-kind contributions. This formal bid represents a commitment of the full effort and resources of the University of Texas and Baylor University to the editorship of the HAHFR.

Should this proposal gain acceptance, Jonathan Brown will become the executive editor of the HAHFR. He would bring to this position his wide-ranging interests in colonial and national period history. Furthermore, Brown is cycling off five years of service as the associate editor of the Latin American Research Review, for which he established a steadily increasing flow of cutting-edge history articles. He especially sought manuscripts written by Latin American scholars. Brown’s commitment in this regard is evident from his past organization of seminars and symposia; participation in international conferences; and publications in Argentina, Chile, and Mexico. As executive editor, Brown would also bring with him the expertise and experience that this University has acquired over the past five years in enhancing the quality of the LARRR.

Editorship at UT-Austin would assure another essential ingredient for the successful transition of the HAHFR. The current managing editor of the LARR, Shannon Halley, has agreed to serve in that same capacity for the HAHFR. She has had four years of solid experience organizing the systems by which the LARR deals efficiently with authors, copyeditors, proofreaders, executives of the university press, book publishers, and journal distributors. Halley maintains the budget, supervises office personnel (graduate research assistants and work-study students), coordinates operation of the LARR-On-Line, and oversees the editorial budget. Halley will begin work for HAHR at a yearly salary of $44,000. Her salary may increase after one year based on the editors’ evaluation of their productivity and expertise. (We assume that the money in the Budget on page 5 will be provided to UT, which will pay the Managing Editor as well as a graduate student assistant.)

Another asset that editorship at UT-Austin would bring to the HAHR is the commitment, enthusiasm, and flexibility that the history department’s Latin Americanists offer. Many of us have served on the editorial advisory boards of the HAHR and other publications; some of us are advisors of foreign journals. Jorge Cañizares-Esguerra, Virginia Garrard-Burnett, and Seth Garfield will fill the positions of associate editors. Susan Deans-Smith, Frank Guridy, and Ann Twinam will not be joining the editorial staff (but may join later as others cycle off and they complete projects to which they are now committed). They remain willing to read an occasion manuscript and otherwise advise the editors. Moreover, the history department next year will undertake to hire a senior historian of Mexico, who will provide additional expertise and editorial assistance to the HAHR. We editors will meet together as a group at least once every two months during the first year and thereafter at regular intervals in order to discuss policies, manuscripts, and administrative procedures.

Professor Joan Supplee of Baylor University will serve as the book review editor. Dr. Supplee served for eight years as director of Baylor’s Latin American Studies program, a program founded in 1969 that offers a minor, a Bachelors of Arts degree and a graduate certificate in Latin American Studies. Currently, she is the Executive Director of the Southwest Council of Latin American Studies (SCOLAS) and is a contributing editor to the Handbook of Latin American Studies for Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay. She has served as president and program director for SCOLAS and the Southwestern Historical Association as well as chair of the Chile-Rio de la Plata section of the CLAH and program coordinator for the Family and Gender Section of LASA. Baylor’s proximity to Austin will permit Professor Supplee to attend editors’ meetings.

The essential elements of this bid are designed to maintain the quality and perhaps enhance the distribution of this venerable journal, now in its 86th year. We prospective editors have published in the HAHR and have an abiding respect for its seminal importance to our expanding field.

By the same token, we expect that the content and emphasis of the articles will change under our editorship. We intend to be proactive, attending national and international conferences with an eye towards identifying cutting-edge works-in-progress and emerging scholars. Our names on the masthead will attract submissions from colleagues who research in subfields to which we have contributed: transnational history, religious, gender, labor, economic, business, race relations, subaltern, and state formation. Special issues featuring discussion of methodologies or revisionist directions will not be ruled out, but we also plan to reserve space for quality submissions on a wide range of topics. As part of our vision for the future direction of HAHR, we intend to encourage Latin American colleagues to send us manuscripts; digitization will help.

We also want to encourage prospective authors to submit their manuscripts to HAHR first—before sending them to competing journals. Therefore, we pledge to expedite in-house reviews within fourteen days from date of submission to the decision whether or not to send a manuscript to outside reviewers. Every manuscript will be read by the executive and one associate editor in that time frame. To facilitate this turnaround goal, we would seek to digitize the entire submission process.

Currently, full-text electronic access to HAHR is available to institutions subscribing to JSTOR (Vols. 1-79 [1918-1999]) and current content (1980 to the present) is available to HAHR subscribers through Duke University Press, http://hahr.dukejournals.org/. We would like to explore the possibility of including the HAHR in the commitment that several other Latin American journals (LARR, BLAR, and JLAS) have made to extend their reach into Latin America. Due to the cost of print subscriptions and commercial electronic access to journals, very few Latin American institutions are able to subscribe to these services. Therefore, the journals above are collaborating to offer full-text access to Latin American institutions at discounted (or free promotional) rates. We also intend to contribute to the print exchanges that UT’s Benson Latin American Collection maintains with Latin American libraries.

To these ends, the College of Liberal Arts and Department of History of the University of Texas will commit the following in-kind donations to the editorship of the HAHR:

* three course reductions per year (equaling fifteen course reductions for four UT editors over the 5-year term);
* funding for travel, per diem, and hotel accommodations for editors to attend the annual meetings of the American Historical Association;
* funding for travel, per diem, and hotel accommodations for the executive editor to attend one international academic meeting per year;
* one graduate research assistant; and
* one work-study student.

The Lozano Long Institute of Latin American Studies (LLILAS) of UT-Austin will supply the HAHR with the very same suite of offices, equipment, supplies, and services that it provided to the LARR. This generosity would reduce the problems encountered in transferring the editorship from Maryland to Texas and in implementing an operational routine that maintains quality and productive capacity. LARR editors will vacate this office suite in August 2007. (Incidentally, LLILAS had previously hosted the editorial offices of both the HAHR and the LARR during the early 1970s, when Brown first arrived here as a graduate student.)

Baylor University pledges the following support for the prospective book review editor:

* One course reduction per semester (equaling 10 course reductions over the five year term);
* funding for travel, per diem, and hotel accommodations for the book review editor to attend the annual meetings of the AHA or LASA;
* travel funding for editorial meetings in Austin; and
* one graduate assistant, office supplies, computer services, and office space.
Please rest assured that we are submitting this bid with the full support of our universities, our departments, UT-Austin’s Lozano Long Latin American Institute, and Baylor’s Latin American Center. Excellence in scholarship will be our primary concern.

Sincerely,

Jonathan C. Brown
Professor of History

BOOK

Accepted for publication in Brazil by the Editora Universidade Estadual de São Paulo.

CURRENT RESEARCH

A book ms. entitled War in the Amazon: Brazil, the United States, and the Struggle over the Rain Forest Tappers During World War II and Beyond. The book will explore the experiences of thousands of Brazil migrant workers brought to the Amazon to tap rubber for the Allies and the historic roots of grass roots mobilization in the rainforest in the 1980s.
